To celebrate Scotland's Year of History, Heritage and Archaeology 2017, experts carefully selected 101 of Edinburgh's most intriguing treasures, each ready to be experienced at locations all around the city. From the prestigious to the prosaic, every object has an important tale to tell and the list – carefully curated by a panel chaired by Edinburgh World Heritage – provides a unique insight into our city's story.

Today, the collection gives as fascinating an insight as ever into Edinburgh's past. Buried amongst the curiosities are several mementoes of some of our most significant milestones: objects range from the ancient past to times of war between Scotland and England, from Auld Reekie's expansion and foundation as the world's festival city to its place today as a global hub of culture and innovation.

Visit edinburgh.org/101 to see a snapshot of each object and its story and find itineraries to help get you started on your journey. To assist rifling such a vast trove, it has been sorted into themes: Building a City; Arts & Performance; Books, Words & Ideas; City of Innovation; Everyday Living; Faith & Nation; On the Dark Side.
